accounts from Kansas. But It is hard to de-che'e between the contradictory accounts which c correct. The Republican says:

Gen. Atchison is said to be in command of the Missourians; Col. Doniphen Is second in command; and Capt. Reid, of Jackson, adjutant. If a battle takes place at all, it will probable to come off this week, and there will be no child's play about it. Lane's men will have, in the event of a fight, the advantage of being better drilled and better equipped, with a better supply of arms, and still we doubt whether they will gain any triumph over the Missouriaes.
